Speech of Mr. Phillips.

From a Cork Paper, September 27.

ROSCOMMON ASSIZES,
Connaughton, vs. Dillon.

Seduction—The following is a correct report of the admirable speech delivered by Mr. Phillips, on this occasion:

In this case I am one of the counsel for the plaintiff, who has directed me to explain to you the wrongs for which, at your hands, he solicits reparation. It appears to me a case which merits much consideration, as well from the novelty of its appearance amongst us, as from the circumstances by which it is attended.—Nor am I ashamed to say, that in my mind, not the least interesting of those circumstances is the poverty of the man who has made this appeal to me—few are the consolations which soothe, hard must be the heart which does not feel for him. He is, gentlemen, a man of lowly birth and humble station, with little wealth, but from the labor of his hands, with no rank but from the integrity of his character, with no recreation but in the circle of his home; and with no ambition but, when his days are full, to leave that little circle the inheritance of an honest name, and the treasure of a good man's memory. Far inferior, indeed, is he in this respect to his fortunate antagonist. He, on the contrary, is amply either blessed or cursed with those qualifications which enables man to adorn or disgrace the society in which he lives. He is, I understand, the representative of an honorable name; the relative of a distinguished family, the supposed heir to their virtues, the indisputable inheritor of their riches. He has been for many years a resident of your county, and has had the advantages of collecting round him all those recollections, which, springing from the scenes of school boy association, or from the more matured enjoyment of the man, crowd as it were unconsciously to the heart, and cling with a venial partiality to the companion and the friend. So impressed, in truth, has he been with those advantages, that, surpassing the usual expenses of a trial, he has selected a tribunal where he vrinly hopes such considerations will have weight, and where he well knows my client's humble rank can have no claim, but that to which his miseries may entitle him. I am sure, however, he has wretchedly miscalculated. I know none of you, personally, but I have no doubt I am addressing men who will not prostrate their consciences before privilege or power—who will remember that there is a nobility above birth, and a wealth beyond riches; who will feel that as in the eye of that God to whose aid they have appealed, there if not the minutest difference between the rag and the robe, so in the contemplation of that law which constitutes our boast, guilt can have no protection or innocence no tyrant, men who will have pride in proving that the noblest adage of our noble constitution is not an illusive shadow, and that the peasant's cottage, roofed by straw, and tenanted by poverty, stands as inviolate from all invasion as the mansion of the monarch.

My client's name, gentlemen, is Connaughton, and when I have given you his name, you have almost all his history.—To cultivate the path of honest industry comprises, in one line, "the short and simple annals of the poor." This has been his humble but honorable occupation. It matters little with what artificial nothings, chance may distinguish the name, or decorate the person; the child of lowly life, with Virtue for his handmaid, holds as proud a title as the highest, as rich an inheritance as the wealthiest.—Well has the Poet of your own country, said it,

Princes and Lords may flourish or may fade,
A breath can make them, as a breath has made;
But a brave peasantry, their country's pride,
When once destroy'd can never be supplied,

For all the virtues which adorn the peasantry, which can render humble life respected, or give the highest stations their most permanent distinction, my client stands conspicuous. An hundred years of sad vicissitude have rolled away since the little farm on which he lives received his family, and during all that time not one accusation has disgraced, not one crime has sullied it. The same spot has seen his grandsire and his parent pass away from this world, and the village memory records their worth, and the rustic tear hallows their resting place. After all, when life's mockeries shall vanish from before us, and the heart that now beats in the proudest bosom here, shall moulder unconscious beneath its kindred clay, art cannot erect a nobler monument or genius compose a purer panegyric. Such, gentlemen, was almost the only inheritance, with which my client entered the world. He did not disgrace it, his youth, his manhood, his age, up to this moment, have passed without a blemish, and he now stands confessedly the head of the little village in which he lives. About five and twenty years ago he married the sister of a highly respectable Roman Catholic Clergyman, by whom he had a family of seven children, whom they educated in the principles of morality & religion, and who, until the defendant's interference, were the pride of their humble home, and the charm or the consolation of its vicissitudes. In their virtuous children the rejoicing parents saw their youth renewed, their age made happy, their days of labor become holidays in their smile, and, if the hand of affliction pressed on them, they looked on their little ones, and their mourning ended. I cannot paint the glorious host of feelings—the joy—the love—the hope—the pride—the blended paradise of rich emotions with which the God of Nature fills the fathers heart when he beholds his child in all its filial loveliness—when the vision of his infancy rises as it when re-animate before him, and a divine vanity exaggerates every trifle into some mysterious omen, which shall smooth his aged rinkles, and make his grave a monument of honor! I cannot describe them, but, if there be a parent on the jury, he will comprehend me. It is stated to me, that of all his children, there were none more likely to excite such feelings in the Plaintiff, than the unfortunate subject of the present action—she was his favorite daughter, and she did not shame his preference. You shall find most satisfactorily that she was without stain or imputation, an aid and a blessing to her parents and an example to her younger sisters, who looked up to her for instruction. She took a pleasure in assisting in the industry of their home, and it was at a neighboring market, where she went to dispose of the little produce of that industry, that she attracted the notice of the defendant. Indeed such a situation was not without its interest: a young female in the bloom of her attractions, exerting her faculties in a parents service, is an object lovely in the eye of God and one would suppose, estimable in the eye of mankind. Far different, however, were the sensations she excited in the defendant. He saw her arrayed, as he confesses, in charms that enchanted him: but her youth, her beauty, the smile of her innocence, and the piety of her toil, but inflamed a brutal and licentious lust, that should have blushed itself away in such a presence. What cared he for the consequences of his gratification, There was,

——No honor no relenting truth,
To paint the parent's fondling over the child.
Then shew the ruin'd maid, & her distraction wild!

What thought he of the home he was to desolate? What thought he of the happiness he was to plunder? His sensual rapine paused not to contemplate the speaking picture of the cottage ruin; the blighted hope; the broken heart; the parent's agony; and last and most withering in the woeful group, the wretched victim herself starving on the sin of a promiscuous prostitution, and at length, perhaps, with her own hand, anticipating the more tedious murder of its diseases! He need not, if I am instructed rightly, have fortured his fancy for the miserable consequences of hope bereft, and expectation plundered. Through no very distant vista, he might have seen the form of deserted loveliness weeping over the worthlessness of his worldly expiation, and warning him that as there were cruelties, no repentance could atone, so there were sufferings neither wealth, nor time, nor absence could alleviate.* If his memory should fail him—if he should deny the picture—no man can tell him halt so efficiently as the venerable advocate he has so judiciously selected that a case might arise, where, though the energy of native virtue should defy the spoliation of the person—still crushed affection might leave an infliction on the mind, perhaps less deadly, but certainly not less indelible. I turn from the subject with an indignation which tortures me into brevity—I turn to the agents by which this contamination was effected.

I almost blush to name them—yet they were worthy of their vocation. They were no other than a menial servant of Mr. Dillon, and a base, abandoned, profligate ruffian; a brother in law of the devoted victim herself, whose bestial appetite he bribed into subserviency!—It does seem as if by such a selection he was determined to degrade the dignity of the master whilst he violated the fine impulses of the man, by not merely associating with his own servant, but by diverting the purest streams of social affinity into the vitiated sewer of his enjoyment. Seduced by such instruments into a low public house in Athlone, the unhappy girl heard, without suspicion their mercenary panegyric on the defendant, when to her amazement, but no doubt according to their previous arrangement, he entered and joined their company. I do confess to you, gentlemen, when I first perused this passage in my brief, I flung it from me with a contemptuous incredulity. What! I exclaimed, as no doubt you are all ready to exclaim, can this be possible? Is it thus I am to find the educated youth of Ireland occupied; is this the employment of the miserable aristocracy that yet linger in the devoted country?—Am I to find them, not in the pursuit of useful science—not in the encouragement of arts or agriculture—not in the relief of an impoverished tenantry—not in the proud march of an unsuccessful but not less sacred patriotism—not in the bright page of warlike immortality dashing its iron crown from guilty greatness, or feeding freedom's laurel with the blood of the despot! But am I to find them amid drunken panders and corrupted slaves, debauching the innocence of village life, and even amid the stews of the tavern, collecting or creating the materials of the brothel!!! Gentlemen, I am still unwilling to believe it, and with all the sincereity of Mr. Dillon's advocate, I do entreat you to reject it altogether, if it be not substantiated by the unimpeachable corroboration of an oath. As I am instructed, he did not, at this time alarm his victim by any direct communication of his purpose: he saw that "she was good as she was fair," and that a premature disclosure would but alarm her virtue in an impossibility of violation. His satelites, however, acted to admiration. They produced some trifle which he had left for her disposal; they declared he had long felt for her a sincere attachment: as a proof that it was pure, they urged the modesty with which at a first interview, elevated above her as he was, he avoided its disclosure; when she pressed the madness of the expectation which could alone induce her to consent to his addresses, they assured her that though in the first instance such an event was impossible, still in time it was far from being improbable—that many men from such motives forgot altogether the difference of station—that Mr. Dillon's own family had already proved, every obstacle might yield to all powerful passion, and induce him to make her his wife who had reposed an affectionate credulity on his honor! Such were the subtle artifices to which he stooped. Do not imagine, however, that she yields immediately and implicitly to their persuasions; should scarcely wonder if she did. Every day shews us the rich, the powerful and the educated bowing before the spell of ambition or avarice, or passion, to the sacrifice of their honor, their country, and their souls, what wonder, then, if a poor ignorant peasant girl hail at once sunk before the united potency of such temptations. But she did not. Many and many a time the truths which had been inculcated by her adoring parents rose up in arms—and it was not until after various interviews and repeated artifices, and united efforts that she yielded her faith, her fame and her fortunes to the disposal of her seducer. Alas! alas! How little did she suppose that a moment was to come when every hope denounced, and every expectation dashed, he was to fling her for her very subsistence on the charity or the crimes of the world she had renounced for him? How little did she reflect that in her humble station, unsoiled and sinless, she might look down upon the elevation to which vice would raise her! Yet even were it a throne, I say she might look down upon it. There is not on this earth a lovelier vision, there is not for the skies a more angelic candidate than a young, modest maiden, robed in chastity; no matter what its habitation, whether it be the palace or the hut,

"So dear to heaven is saintly chastity,
That when a soul is found sincerely so,
A thousand liveried angels lackey her,
Driving far off each thing of sin and guilt,
And in clear dream of solemn vision
Tell her of things that no gross ear can hear.
Till oft converse with heavenly habitants,
Begin to cast a beam on the outward shape,
The unpolluted temple of the mind,
And turns it by degrees to the soul's essence,
Till all be made immortal."

Such is the supreme power of chastity, as described by one of our divinest bards and the pleasure which I feel in the recitation of such a passage is not a little enhanced, by the pride that few countries more fully afford its exemplification than our own. Let foreign envy decry us as they will, chastity is the instinct of the Irish female—the pride of her talents—the power of her beauty—the splendor of her accomplishments are but so many handmaids of this vestal virtue—it adorns her in the court—it ennobles her in the cottage—whether she basks in prosperity or pines in sorrow, it clings about her like the diamond of the morning on the mountain flower, trembling even in the ray that at once exhibits and enhales it! Rare in our land is the absence of this virtue. Thanks to the modesty that venerates—thanks to the manliness that brands and avenges its violations. You have seen that it was by no common temptations even this humble villager yielded to seduction. I now come, gentlemen, to another fact in the progress of this transaction, betraying in my mind as base a premeditation and as low and as deliberate a deception as I ever heard of. While this wretched creature was in a kind of counterpoise between her fear & her affections—struggling as well as she could between passion enflamed and virtue unextinguished, Mr. Dillon ardently vowing that such an event as separation was impossible—ardently vowing an eternal attachment, insisted upon perfecting an article which should place her above the reach of contingencies. Gentlemen you shall see this document voluntarily executed by an educated and estated gentlemen of your country. I know not how you will feel, but for my part I protest I am in a suspence of admiration between the virtue of the proposal and the magnificent prodigality of the provision. Listen to the article—it is all in his own hand writing; "I promise, says he, to give Mary Connaghtan the sum of ten pounds sterling, when I part with her but if she, said Mary, should at any time hereafter conduct herself improperly or [mark this gentlemen] has done so before the drawing of this article, I am not bound to pay the sum of ten pounds and this article becomes null and void as if the same was never executed. "John Dillon"——There, Gentlemen, there is the noble and dignified document for you——take it into your box, for I know not how to comment on it. Oh yes, I have heard of ambition urging men to crime; I have heard of love inflaming even to madness; I have read of passion rushing over law and and religion to enjoyment; but never until this did I see frozen avarice, chilling the hot pulse of sensuality and desire, pause before its brutish draught, that it might add deceit to desolation; I need not tell you that having provided in the very execution of this article for its pre-determined infringment, that knowing as he must any stipulation for the purchase of vice to be invalid by our law; that having in the body of this article inserted a provision against that previous pollution which his prudent caprice might invent hereafter, but which his own conscience, her universal character, and even his own desire for her possession, all assured him did not exist at the time—I need not tell you that he now urges the invalidity of that instrument—that he now presses that previous pollution—that he refuses from his splendid income the pittance of 10l. to the wretch he has ruined, and spurns her from him to pine beneath the reproaches of a parent's mercy, or linger out a living death in the charnel house of prostitution! You see, gentlemen, to what designs like these may lead a man—I have no doubt, if Mr. Dillon had given his heart fair play, had let his own nature gain a moment's ascendancy, he would not have acted so, but there is something in guilt which infatuates its votaries forward, it may begin with a promise broken, but it will end with the home depopulated, yet there is something in a seducer of peculiar turpitude. I know of no character so vile, so detestable. He is the vilest of robbers, for he plunders happiness. the worst of murderers, for he murders innocence. his appetites are of the brute, his arts of the daemon, the heart of the child and the corps of the parent are the foundations of the altar which he rears to a lust, whose fires are the fires of hell, and whose incense is the agony of virtue! I hope Mr. D's advocate may prove he does not deserve to rank in such a class as this, but if he does, I hope the infatuation inseperably connected with such proceedings may tempt him to deceive you through the same plea by which he has defrauded his miserable dupe. I dare him to attempt the defamation of a character, which before his cruelties, never was even suspected. Happily, gentlemen. happily for herself, this wretched creature thus cast upon the world, appealed to the parental refuge she had forfeited. I need not describe to you the parent's anguish at the heart rending discovery. God help the poor man when misfortunes comes upon him! How few are his resources! How distant his consolation! You must not forget, gentlemen, that it is not the unfortunate victim herself who appeals to you for compensation. Her crimes, poor wretch, have outlawed her from retribution, and however the temptations by which her erring nature was seduced, may procure an audience from the ear of mercy, the stern morality of the law refuses their interference. No, no, it is the wretched parent who comes this day before you, his aged locks withered by misfortunes, and his heart broken by crimes of which he was unconscious. He resorts to this tribunal in the language of the law, claiming the value of his daughter's servitude. but let it not escape you that it is for here mere manual labors he solicits compensation. No, you are to compensate him for all he has suffered—for all he is to suffer, for feelings outraged, for gratifications plundered, for honest pride put to the blush, for the exiled endearments of his once happy home, for all those innumerable and instinctive exacies with which a virtuous daughter fills a father's heart, for which language is too poor to have a name, but of which nature is abundantly and richly eloquent! Do not suppose I am endeavouring to influence you by the power of declamation. I am laying down to you the British Law, as liberally expounded and solemnly adjudged. I speak the language of the English Lord Eldon, a Judge of great experience and greater learning. [Mr. Philips here cited several cases as decided by Lord Eldon,]—Such, gentlemen, is the language of Lord Eldon. I speak also on the authority of our own Lord Avonmore, a judge who illuminated the Bench by his genius, endeared it by his suavity, and dignified it by his bold uncompromising probity: one of those rare men who hid the thorns of law beneath the flowers of literature, and as it were, with the hand of an enchanter, changed a wilderness into a garden! I speak upon that high authority, but I speak upon authority paramount to all!—on the authority of Nature, rising up within the heart of a man, and calling for vengeance upon such an outrage. God forbid that in a case of this kind, we were to grope our way through the ruins of antiquity, and blunder over statute, and burrow through black letter, in search of an interpretation, which Providence has engraved in living letters on every human heart. Yes—If there be one amongst you blessed with a daughter the smiles of whose infancy still cheer your memory, and the promise of whose youth illuminates your hopes, who has endeared the toils of your manhood whom you look up to as the solace of of your declining years, whose embrace alleviated the pang of seperation, whose growing welcome hailed your oft anticipated return. Oh, if there be one amongst you to whom those hopes are precious; let them only fancy that daughter torn from his caresses by the seducer's arts and cast on the world, robbed of her innocence; & then let him ask his heart, "what money could reprize him.

The defendant cannot complain that I put it thus to you. If in the place of seducing, he had assaulted the poor girl, if he had attempted by force what he had achieved by fraud, his life would have been the forfeit; and yet how trifling in comparison would have been the parent's agony! He has no right then to complain if you should estimate this outrage at the price of his very existence. I am told, indeed, this gentleman entertains an opinion, prevalent enough in the age of feudalism, as arrogant as it was barbarous, that the poor are only a species of property, to be treated according to interest or caprice; and that wealth is at once a patent for crime, and an exemption from its consequences. Happily for this land, the day of such opinions has past over it—the eye of a purer feeling and more profound philosophy now beholds riches but as one of the aids to virtue, and sees in oppressed poverty only an additional stimulus to encreased protection. A generous heart cannot help feeling that in cases of this kind, the poverty of the injured is a dreadful aggravation. If the rich suffer, they have much to console them; but when a poor man loses the darling of his heart—the sole pleasure with which nature blessed him—how abject! how careless is the despair of his destitution! Believe, me, gentlemen, you have not only a solemn duty to perform, but you have an awful responsibility imposed upon you. You are this day, in some degree, trustees for the morality of the people—perhaps of the whole nation; for depend upon it, if the sluices of immorality are once opened among the lower orders of the people, the frightful tide, drifting upon its surface all that is dignified or dear—will soon rise even to the habitations of the highest. I feel, gentlemen, I have discharged my duty—I am sure you will do yours. I repose my client with confidence in your hands—and most fervently do I hope, that when evening shall find you at your happy fire sides, surrounded by the sacred circle of your children, you may not feel the heavy curse knawing at your heart, of having let loose, unpunished, the prowler that may devour them. Gentlemen, we will now call our evidence. I assure you I have stated this case far less strongly than my instructions would warrant me: but even so, I cannot avoid warning you to take no word of mine for granted, and to decide solely according to the testimony produced to you.

There was a verdict for the plaintiff, of 2,500l.

* Mr. Phillips here alluded to a verdict of 5,000l. obtained at the late Galway assizes against the defendant, at the suit of Miss Wilson, a very beautiful and interesting young lady, for a breach of promise of marriage. Mr. Whitestone, who now pleaded for Mr. Dillon, was Miss Wilson's advocate against him on the occasion alluded to.

Potomac Company.

At a meeting of the Stockholders of the Potomac Company, held at Semmes's tavern in Georgetown, on the 29th Nov. 1816, according to law, Charles Worthington was appointed Chairman and Joseph Brewer Secretary. Elie Williams and George Peter, Esqrs. were appointed a committee to examine the Proxies: the number of shares voted were 274.

A proposition was made to the meeting by the proprietor of the adjacent lands, in relation to the use of the water, for manufacturing and mechanical purposes, of the canal at the little falls.

The directors of the company present reported to the meeting a resolution of the board of directors, passed on the 15th instant, whereby they had appointed a committee of stockholders to take measures for opposing before the legislature of Virginia a petition "to incorporate a company for the purpose of making a canal from the Seneca falls, or the mouth of Sugar Land Run, on the Potomac, in the county of Fairfax, in the town of Alexandria."

The chairman of the said committee stated that they had had a meeting, and having ascertained that by a special call a general meeting of the company would take place in a few days, they had determined to adopt no decisive course in the duty assigned to them previous to such general meeting, in order that the Potomac Company might have an opportunity if it should think proper to do so, to act directly on the subject.

Whereupon, Resolved, That whereas it appears that only a single member from the western shore of the Potomac is present that the State of Virginia is not represented at this meeting, and as the absence of the gentlemen holding the proxy of the state of Virginia and of the members residing in the town of Alexandria, and the neighboring parts of the district of Columbia and the state of Virginia, may have been occasioned by the rainy weather now prevailing, that this meeting adjourn to meet at the same place on Tuesday next, the 3d of Dec. at 11 o'clock in order to give an opportunity to the absent members and proxies of attending, and that the chairman send a copy of these proceedings to each of the directors of the company residing in Alexandria, and that he request on behalf of this meeting their attendance at the adjourned meeting on Tuesday next, and that he further request the said directors to give notice to such of the stockholders as may reside in Alexandria of the time place and object of the said adjourned meeting.

Resolved, that these proceedings be published in the newspapers of the City of Washington, Georgetown and Alexandria, for the information of the stockholders generally, and of the proxies, and for the purpose of giving them an opportunity of attending at the said adjourned meeting.

JAMES KENNEDY & SON,

BOOKSELLERS, KING STREET,

Have just received from LEE'S PATENT MEDICINE Store, No. 46 Maiden Lane, N. York.

A FRESH SUPPLY

Of the following genuine Medicines.

For the prevention and cure of Bilious and Malignant Fevers, is recommended

Hahn's Anti-Bilious Pills.

THIS Medicine has been attended with a degree of success highly grateful to the inventor's feelings, in several parts of the West Indies, and the Southern & Middle States, particularly in N. York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Petersburg, Richmond, Norfolk, Edenton, Wilmington, Charleston, and Savannah. The testimony of a number of persons at each of the above places can be adduced, who have reason to believe, that a timely use of this salutary remedy has, under Providence, preserved their lives, when in the most alarming circumstances.

Facts of this conclusive nature speak more in favour of a medicine than columns of pompous eulogy, founded on mere assertion.

It is not, indeed, presumptuously proposed as an infallible cure, but the inventor has every possible reason that can result from extensive experience, for believing that a dose of these Pills, taken once in every two weeks, during the prevalence of our bilious fevers, will prove an infallible preventative; and further, that in the earlier stages of those diseases, their use will very generally succeed in restoring health, and frequently in cases esteemed desperate, and beyond the power of common remedies.

The operation of these pills is perfectly mild, so as to be used with safety by persons in every situation, and of every age.

They are excellently adapted to cary off superfluous bile & prevent its morbid secretions—to restore & amend the appetite—to produce a free perspiration and thereby prevent colds which is so often of fatal consequences. A dose never fails to remove a cold it taken on its first appearance—they are celebrated for removing habitual costiveness—sickness at the stomach and severe head-ache—and ought to be taken by all persons on a change of climate.

They have been found remarkably efficatious in preventing and curing disorders attendant on long voyages, and should be procured and carefully preserved for use by every seaman.

HAMILTON'S WORM DESTROYING LOZENGES.

Which have cured an immense number of persons of both sexes, of every age, and in every situation, of various dangerous complaints arising from worms, and from obstructions orfoulness in their stomach and bowels.

This medicine bears no analogy whatever to others of similar titles so commonly complained of, as operating with violence; on the contrary, a particular excellence of this remedy is its being suited to every age and constitution. It contains nothing but what is perfectly innocent, and is also mild in its operation, cannot injure the most delicate pregnant lady or the tenderest infant of a week old, should no worms exist in the body; but will, without pain or griping, cleanse the stomach and bowels, of whatever is foul or offensive, and thereby prevent the production of worms, and many fatal disorders. The lozenges are particularly efficacious in carrying off all gross humours and eruptions, feverish and bilious complaints, and are the safest and mildest purgative that can be used on any occasion.

DESCRIPTION OF WORMS.

And the symptoms by which they are known:

Worms which infest the human body, are chiefly of four kinds, viz.—The Teres, or large round worm; the Ascarides, or small maw-worm; the Cucurbitina, or short, flat, white worm; and lastly, the Tænia, or tape-worm, so called from its resemblance to tape. This is often many yards long, and is full of joints. It is most hurtful and most difficult to remove.

Among the symptoms attending worms are—disagreeable breath, especially in the morning; bad and corrupted gums; itching in the nose, and about the seat; convulsions, epileptic fits, and sometimes privation of speech; starting and grinding of the teeth in sleep; irregular appetite, sometimes loathing food, and sometimes voracious; purging, with slimy & fœtid stools; vomitiug; large and hard belly; pains and sickness at the stomach; slow fever, with small and irregular pulse; a dry cough; excessive thirst; sometimes pale and unhealthy countenance, and sometimes the face bloated and flushed.

Persons afflicted with any of the above symptoms, should have immediate recourse to Hamilton's Worm Destroying Lozenges, which have been constantly attended with success, in all complaints similar to those above described.

A dose of this medicine given occasionally during th warm seaeon, will effectually prevent "the vomiting and purging of children"—a dreadful disorder, which annually destroys thousands of the infant part of our citizens. It is likewise the mildest and most certain remedy known, and has restored to health and strength a great number, when in an advanced stage of this fatal complaint. Particular and plain instructions are given for every part of the necessary treatment in such cases.

Children generally take this medicine with eagerness; having a pleasing appearance, and an agreeable taste.

The Persian Lotion operates mildly, without impeding the natural insensible perspiration, which is essential to health, yet its effects are speedy and permanent, rendering the skin delicately soft and smooth and improving the complexion.

The Restorative Powder for the teeth and Gums.

This excellent preparation comforts and strengthens the gums, preserves the enamel from decay, and cleanses and whitens the teeth, by absorbing all the acrimonious slime and foulness, which suffered to accumulate, never fails to injure and finally ruin them.
